

Can't Tell Juvenile Delinquent By Makeup

By BOBBY WESTBROOK

(Second In A Series)

A JUVENILE delinquent may be a punk in a leather jacket and over-long hair, flunking in school, a trial to his teachers, and shunned by his classmates. But he may be also a bright-faced boy in neat clothes with plenty of money in his pocket, doing good—or at least passing—work in school. He may even be a boy with an after-school job he does conscientiously and well.

Part of the shock the school community of East Stroudsburg has felt with the arrest of 22 of its young people under 18 years of age—most of them between 12 and 15—has come from the fact that this particular group doesn't follow the pattern they have come to expect.

The fact that these children seem to have enough money has come as a shock to the general public but not to educators. Lack of money, they have discovered over the years, is not in itself a primary cause of juvenile delinquency.

However, certain behavior patterns have served as an indication to teachers that here is trouble building up. Even in the very early grades, a good teacher recognizes the symptoms: resentment of discipline, habitual truancy, school work not up to their own capabilities, destruction and vandalism on school property, and most of all, a desire to hurt others.

"That child needs help," a good teacher will say to herself. Sometimes, with the cooperation of parents and agencies in the community, that help is available—and effective. Too often the teacher sadly sees her own premonition of disaster fulfilled in the years ahead.

That is the normal pattern. But somewhere the pattern broke down and the schools, concerned and puzzled, are wondering why.

This particular police round-up did not involve any senior high school students, so far as Superintendent Principal Carl Secor or High School Principal Ralph Burrows knew.

Shocked, Dismayed
Both were shocked and dismayed. They have been rightfully proud of the fact that the students have taken good care of their new school and there has been no vandalism.

That includes, of course, the Junior High School which is now in the same building. However, there were Junior High School boys involved.

Principal Theodore Miller has checked the school records of all those whom the police have interviewed.

"By and large these boys have not had trouble in school," he said. "There are no disciplinary problems listed on their records. Certainly, they are not the ones we would have expected to get into trouble."

"It is true," he added thoughtfully, "that in some cases, the teachers noticed a falling off of interest in class, a lack of response to the teacher's interest we notice after the fact. These boys haven't been doing as well in their school work as they should; but how could they if they have been ramming around instead of doing their homework?"

"They have not been active in our extra-curricular activities, either. We have tried to provide activities to the interests of all the students. We consider them an important part of school life: things like intramural basketball, our chorus and bands."

"Perhaps we haven't provided what these boys are interested in. But perhaps they would have become interested if they'd had a little push from home, a little encouragement from their parents to take advantage of the opportunities the school makes available to them.

"Certainly happy, well-adjusted children don't need 'the gang' to give them a feeling of security and recognition."

In the same age groups at St. Matthew's Parochial School, the same things seemed to hold true. There was the same sense of shock and dismay. The boys there had not been involved in disciplinary problems. There had been no petty thefts in school. In fact, several of the boys were above average in intelligence and in their school work.

The infection has not stopped with the Junior High age-level but has spread down into the sixth grades of the elementary schools where the children are excited and keyed up that boys they know, boys just a little older, are in trouble. The police had questioned them about their own knowledge of these affairs.

"If we didn't see this coming, why didn't we?" grieved Mrs. Pauline Peterson, supervisor of elementary education in the jointure. "Certainly some of these children have passed through our elementary grades."

"A child isn't two persons: one in school and one outside. He should have brought the problems of the outside into open discussion in his social living classes; he should have carried the lessons he learned about decency, government under law and respect for the rights of others with him when he left the school building."

More Dangerous
"The fact that these tendencies have gone underground where we haven't seen them is more dangerous than if they were out in the open. It means we will have to re-evaluate our teaching program," she said.

"We aren't teaching text-books, we're teaching children. History and geography and literature aren't just something to memorize but something a child must evaluate and apply to his own time and his own actions."

"And there must be two-way communication. A teacher should know what the child is thinking and feeling and acting upon. We can learn that by observing them through creative activities like writing and dramatization and play.

"We need to have a meeting of minds—not just the schools, but the total resources of the community if we're going to solve this thing."

In this Mrs. Peterson was echoing a sentiment which many of the educators expressed. The heart of the problem is the home. But, as several people pointed out, very often the parents need help, too.

It's the whole community's problem was the consensus but the schools of East Stroudsburg are aware of that problem now, deeply concerned and more than willing to assume their share of responsibility in solving it.

State House GOP Looking For Deal

HARRISBURG (AP)—House Republican leader Albert W. Johnson said Thursday he doesn't think his side will offer any votes on appropriation bills next week while Congressional reapportionment is pending.

He advised majority leader Stephen McCann that the matter will be reviewed when the GOP members caucus Monday, but that he believes "that we will be firm."

Underlining this resolve, House Republicans proposed a plan for cutting down the state's 30 Congressional seats to 27, as required by the 1960 census count.

Johnson candidly admitted that the bill was put in to strengthen the GOP position next week should they decide: no agreement on reapportionment; no votes for appropriations.

Eliminations
The Republicans would be able to say that they at least had put a reapportionment plan before the House.

The plan, drawn up by Rep. Leroy A. Weidner of Berks County, would eliminate one Democratic-held seat in Philadelphia, one Republican-held seat in the 16-county central Pennsylvania area and combine one Democratic and one Republican district in the Anthracite region.

The Anthracite districts now are represented by the respective deans of the two parties' delegations to Congress: Republican Ivor D. Fenton, Mahanoy City, Schuylkill County, and Democrat Francis E. Walter of Easton.

Walter has been talking about resigning.

The plan, although simple in explanation, faces severe tests.

It has been assumed that U.S. Rep. William J. Green, Philadelphia Democratic power, won't agree to lopping off one of the city's six seats.

On the Republican side, there is disagreement about which GOP district should be wiped out in reapportionment.

Johnson made it clear that Weidner's plan, at least for now, was not endorsed by the whole party.

Republicans are gunning for one of the Philadelphia seats and freely admit that their concept of a "fair and reasonable reapportionment" involves elimination of one of the city's districts.

The appropriations bills being used as a weapon in this struggle are the so-called "non-preferreds." They are not mandated by law; therefore, it requires a two-thirds vote to pass them in either house. In the lower chamber that means 140 votes and Democrats have only 109 members.

More than $64 million is involved.

The reapportionment debate closed a long and weary week for the House members and a six-and-one-half-hour session Thursday.

Quit For Week
The Senate quit for the week Wednesday.

In other legislative highlights: Expenses—Gov. Lawrence signed an appropriation bill to provide money to pay the first half of the $3,000 expense allowance due the 50 senators.

Industrial Development — The House passed, 175-1, a bill implementing the new federal redevelopment program. The measure goes to the Senate for further action.

Education—A portion of the recommendations from Gov. Lawrence's committee on education were submitted to the House. They duplicate bills introduced days ago in the Senate.

Suspensions—The House passed a bill prohibiting Pennsylvania from imposing a penalty on its motorists after they have served a suspension for a violation in another state, or to impose a penalty more severe for that violation than the penalty provided by the other state. The vote was 188-0 and the measure now goes to the Senate.

Exempt Cab Drivers
School Spending—Schools would be permitted to appropriate their funds to buy athletic equipment or uniforms for school bands and choirs under another bill approved by the House, 153-17 and sent to the Senate.

Minimum Wage — An amendment exempting taxi drivers in municipalities with a population under 15,000 was written into the administration's $1 minimum hourly wage bill.

Another amendment would lower the minimum to 85 cents for learners and apprentices.

The bill still is awaiting final House action.

Tractors' Group Ready To Trade

DETROIT (AP)—The Tractors for Freedom Committee Thursday night advised Fidel Castro that it was prepared to move with dispatch and ship the first consignment of 100 tractors not later than two weeks from today. It also designated a technical committee made up of six agricultural and tractor experts to travel to Havana.

The technical committee will arrive in Havana next Monday if the Cuban prime minister approves. The full committee has asked Castro to advise it of his approval or disapproval of the experts.

The committee in its communication to Castro recommended that the International Red Cross be asked to handle the details relating to the release of the 1,200 prisoners in the proposed trade for 500 tractors.

"Beyond Scope"
The reply to Castro, which was signed by Eleanor Roosevelt, Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, Walter P. Reuther and Joseph M. Dodge, told the Cuban leader that his "cable dated June 6 dealt with political and propaganda issues beyond the scope or jurisdiction of our committee of private citizens."

The Tractors for Freedom group advised Castro that following the first consignment of 100 tractors, to be shipped no later than two weeks from Thursday additional consignments of tractors would follow in lots of 100 until the total of 500 was delivered.

Breton's Farmers Protest

MORLAIX, France (AP)—Angry Breton farmers arriving aboard trucks and tractors seized the local governor's office Thursday and held the town in a state of virtual siege for several hours. They were protesting the government's farm price structure.

They dispersed Thursday night after day-long demonstrations brought reinforcements of riot police rushing to the town in northwest France.

The farmers, enraged by the low prices paid for a plentiful potato harvest, plotted their protest action at a secret council of war held in a Brittany farmhouse during the night. They moved on the town at dawn, achieving complete surprise.

Mayor Jacques Seron was aroused from his bed and hustled into the street with his family as flying rocks shattered his windows. He went to local gendarmerie headquarters and set up a temporary command post there.

Several hundred farmers stormed into the town hall, ripping out telephone wires. Outside, their comrades tore up paving stones from the cobble street and erected barricades. Residents awoke to find this usually sleepy market town blocked. Even foreign tourists were unable to leave.

By midmorning it was estimated about 5,000 farmers were milling around the square in the center of town or manning the improvised barricades on its outskirts.

Soon after noon the farmers fled away for a lunch break, leaving the town hall, which was promptly recaptured by the evicted governor and a squad of police.

Then riot police started arriving in town.

Lawrence Asks Tax To Up Aid To Public Schools

HARRISBURG (AP)—Gov. Lawrence is going to ask the General Assembly next week to enact an intangible personal property tax to raise state aid to public schools, informed sources said Thursday.

This appeared to be the main point of the speech he plans to deliver to a joint session of the House and Senate Monday evening.

It also was reported that he would take a position on the dozens of recommendations resulting from his committee on education's year-long study of Pennsylvania's public education system.

Passed House In 1959

tax program. It passed the House that year, but was pigeonholed in the Senate which was then under Republican control.

At the six-mill rate proposed in 1959, it would produce an estimated $27-$30 million for the 1961-62 school year.

The tax would be levied on such paper holdings as stocks and bonds.

In view of the increasing speculation in the legislature about putting off action on education, and reapportionment, it may be the governor also will reaffirm his feeling that the legislators should stay on the job until these two major issues are resolved.

The feeling which the governor would have to counter is that it would be impossible for the legislature to resolve these complex problems by the end of this month and therefore should postpone them for a special session in the fall or next year.

The intangible personal property tax has been held in reserve this session as a possible levy to finance increased state aid to schools.

The fiscal report earlier this week, which disclosed that the state had a deficit exceeding $33 million in the 1959-61 biennium ending May 31, precluded any hope of finding more money for education in the existing tax structure.

11 New 'Freedom Riders' End In Same Place--Jail

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Eleven travelers made further tests of Mississippi's segregation laws Thursday. Like 81 others who preceded them, they ended in jail.

The 11 included nine "Freedom Riders" from New Orleans, La.; a New York State assemblyman, and an official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

They attempted desegregation moves at a train station and an airlines terminal. Police charged all with breach of the peace.

Their arrest brought the total of jailed riders to 92. Only one continued a hunger strike. Police said there were 275 more jail spaces still available here.

As has been the pattern here, there was no violence.

Mark Lane, 33, a New York state lawmaker from Manhattan, and Percy Sutton, 40, president of a New York City branch of the NAACP, were arrested soon after they got off a Delta Airlines plane.

They refused to leave the white men's rest room.

The two, who were served without incident at an earlier stop in a Montgomery, Ala., bus terminal restaurant, said they were merely curious travelers.

"We're not challenging any racial customs," Sutton said in Montgomery. "We're just travelers curious to see what the situation is."

"I'm very concerned that some of my constituents have been arrested in the South and I'm looking into the situation," Lane said.

Later, nine riders from New Orleans—including four white girls—were arrested in the railroad terminal.

Police took the four white girls and a Negro girl into custody when they sat together in the railroad waiting room. Four Negro men, who took seats a few feet away, were arrested when they refused orders to move.

Talks Off Indefinitely

14-Nation Conference On Laos Peace Postponed

GENEVA (AP)—The 14-nation conference on Laos was postponed indefinitely Thursday because of fighting at the mountain-top village of Padong, and the Soviet Union apparently had nothing to say that would get the talks going here again.

In Washington President Kennedy said the United States is not giving up efforts to negotiate on Laos.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko returned to the conference from Moscow, but told newsmen "my pockets are empty."

Britain, as co-chairman of the conference, postponed the talks indefinitely because of "apparent serious violation" of the ceasefire by pro-Communist Laotian rebels.

Was Hope
There was hope that Gromyko would bring instructions from Soviet Premier Khrushchev that would break the deadlock over Western demands that the International Control Commission in Laos be given power and equipment to establish an effective ceasefire. Khrushchev agreed with President Kennedy in their talks at Vienna last week on the importance of a ceasefire.

Gromyko's words to newsmen as he stepped from his plane sounded discouraging, however. He said nothing about any new instructions.

Gromyko said he had come to resume the conference.

"We still believe that if all parties are willing it is possible to reach agreement," he said. "I repeat, if all parties are willing."

Though American delegates in Geneva first talked of going home after Thursday's postponement, Kennedy in Washington said they would remain here in the hope of resuming negotiations.

"I think we'll stay at Geneva and see if we can come to a neutral and independent Laos," he said.

He prodded the Soviet Union with the warning that he felt the Laos negotiations were the key to future East-West bargaining.

The head of the pro-Communist Laotian delegation, Phoumy Vongvichit, told newsmen Thursday the United States had paraded "bands and arms" to reinforce the troops and Meo tribesmen at Padong, the village that fell Wednesday after prolonged Rebel artillery and infantry assaults.

Padong stuck like a sore thumb in rebel territory 20 miles south of rebel headquarters at Xieng Khouang. Rebel attacks were stepped up after the ceasefire was proclaimed May 3.

The conference here has made no headway since before the Kennedy-Khrushchev talks in Vienna.

Satellite Goes Aloft Okay But Fails To Hit Orbit

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—A Discoverer satellite roared aloft in beautiful style Thursday, but failed to achieve orbit. The Air Force said it wasn't sure what went wrong.

A man in a white suit, who walked onto the launch pad and administered a couple of whacks with a sledge hammer shortly before the launch, stole the show.

The rocket, No. 24 in the series, had two missions—one a capsule recovery try, the other secret.

Telemetry signals failed shortly after the first and second stages separated, and the Air Force said it could not tell whether the second stage ignited, or ignited and behaved improperly. Both stages probably fell into the Pacific.

Launch Pad Display
The main interest, to observers here, at least, was the last-minute launch pad display.

Good Morning!

Career: Something you study years to get into and spend the rest of your life trying to earn enough to get out of.

With 30 seconds to blast off, the countdown was halted and the towering missile stood hissing and fuming. Shortly, two carloads of men—seven in all—drove up.

They swarmed onto the pad. Newsmen, who had not before seen workmen so close to a missile so soon before a launch at this West Coast space base, were mystified. Later, the Air Force gave this explanation:

Three metal arms that hold the rocket to its pad failed to spring back when they were supposed to. The seven men, from Douglas Aircraft, manufacturer of the Thor first-stage rocket, fixed it. One, wearing a white asbestos suit, did it by striking a cotter pin with a sledge.

Shortly after they left the scene, the rocket made a perfect take-off.

The Air Force said such last-minute launch pad appearances while rare, are not unprecedented.

Only Wednesday, a big Atlas missile blew up on its launch pad before leaving the ground for a research and development shot.

The big rocket blasted off from its seakale launch pad in windy but crystal-clear weather. It was aimed south at polar orbit.

CWV Name Walter 'Man Of The Year'

U.S. REP. Francis E. Walter, Easton Democrat, will receive the Catholic War Veterans "Man of the Year" award on June 17 at the annual convention of the Catholic War Veterans of Pennsylvania in Pottsville.

Walter reportedly received unanimous endorsement for the award, given each year to a prominent Pennsylvanian who has brought honor to the state in one field or another.

The award will be presented at the closing banquet of the convention in the Neco-Allen Hotel. Michael Hanna, Philadelphia, state commander, is expected to make the presentation.

The state convention will open on June 15. A parade will take place at 5:30 p.m. June 17, prior to the banquet in Walter's honor.

Lions Pay Tribute To Founder

MEMBERS of the Stroudsburg Lions Club at their recent session in the Penn-Stroud Hotel were informed of the death of Melvin Jones, long-time resident of Chicago.

He was the founder of International Lionism. Local members stood in a minute of silence in honor of the departed leader.

Awards were announced to the winners of the essay contest in the twin boroughs on the subject of vision value and eye conservation.

The winner for East Stroudsburg High was Miss Sandra Macleod.

First prize winner for Stroudsburg High was Miss Carol Anderson. Miss Sandra Bell won the second prize for Stroudsburg High and Miss Carol Sabinsky the third. The young folks were presented to the club.

Announcement was made of the 50th wedding anniversary of Leon and Mrs. John Bohan.

The inter-club session will be held at the Penn-Stroud on Tuesday. Installation of officers of the clubs in the district will highlight the session.

Equity Gap Reduced By Corporations

THE CRITICAL equity gap in financing small and medium-size businesses is being reduced by corporations set up under the Small Business Investment Co. Act of 1958, the Kiwanis Club was told Wednesday at its weekly meeting at the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

Alex Bensinger, Stroudsburg attorney, said upwards of 180 corporations had been formed since the act was passed by Congress under the Eisenhower Administration.

These privately owned and operated companies are licensed and regulated by the government and must be capitalized at $300,000 or more to qualify, Bensinger said. They help small businesses, he explained, by issuing long-term mortgages and convertible debenture, thereby encouraging free enterprise among smaller firms.

The money advanced to businesses is in the nature of loans and must not be regarded as government handouts, the speaker remarked. SBIC, he added, is not competitive with banks, some of which take part in the program. No company will be set up until it has justified its need within a particular area to the SBIC, which operates under the Small Business Administration.

Bensinger was introduced by John Watt, program chairman.

Consultant Outlines Plan For E-Burg Urban Renewal

MICHEL CABOT of Isadore Candau and Associates, Scranton, outlined activities of the borough planning commission at a meeting of the East Stroudsburg Taxpayers Assn.

The firm is planning consultant to the borough. Cabot particularly discussed the million-dollar plan for urban renewal in the Lincoln Ave. section, where flood damage in 1955 was heavy.

The project, which will cost approximately $1,500,000 in federal funds, $170,000 from the state and the balance in credit due the borough for flood control expenditures.

Tentative Plans

Tentative plans call for Brown St. frontage to be used for commercial establishments with the street being widened and improved to provide a more attractive entrance to the borough and a more efficient traffic flow. Among other things, the sharp curve at the S. Courtland St. intersection would be eliminated.

The land between Brodheads Creek and the Erie-Lackawanna Railroad, behind Brown St., would be used for industrial purposes.

CROWN BEARER—Miss Shelley Clark, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clark, Broad St., Stroudsburg, will crown "Miss Pocono Mountains" at the contest's annual pageant at the Sherman Theatre, Tuesday night, June 20.

Discussions On Compact Continue

A HOUSE vote on a proposed compact for development of the Delaware River basin has been set back for a week or two due to the illness of Rep. Francis E. Walter, D-Pa., the bill's sponsor in the House, but further discussion of the proposal continued this week in Washington.

Adies of Walter and Sens. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., and Clifford Case, R-N.J., conferred with officials from the Delaware River Basin Compact Commission for several hours.

Jack Yoho, aide to Walter, reported the conferees seem to be "getting closer and closer to agreement." Interior Department officials have been reluctant to accept the compact as written.

Shortway Project Hearing

A PUBLIC hearing will be held if requested, by the Department of Highways on the proposed construction of a 3.3-mile section of Traffic Route 940 in the Pocono Mountain resort area, in Monroe County.

The purpose of the hearing is to determine the economic effect of the project on the community through which it will traverse.

The proposed project begins on Traffic Route 940, 2 miles west of Pocono Summit and will proceed southeast following the route and crossing over Interstate 80-S (Keystone Shortway). It continues east on relocation to a point 2,200 feet east at Pocono Summit where it joins Traffic Route 940 then following this route easterly to the intersection with U.S. 611 in Mount Pocono Borough.

In the portion east of the proposed interchange with Interstate 80-S the construction will consist of two 12-foot lanes on each side of a four-foot concrete divider.

Plans for the proposed construction are available for inspection at the office of the Department's district engineer at 1713 Lehigh St., Allentown.

Requests for a hearing must be received in writing by the district engineer on or before June 20.

Latts spoke of the new school and the many hard hours of work involved in its conception. He told the class that they should expect the same hard work to face them now that they were graduating.

He congratulated the administration, board of education and the people of the jointure who made it possible for the new school.

Other speakers were Diana Correll, valedictorian; Ethel Hawk, salutatorian; Harry T. Young, assistant supervising principal; John C. Mills, supervising principal.

Presenting the valedictorian of the West End Lions Club to Miss Correll was R. V. Kresge, past president of the club. The Salutatory Award was presented to Miss Hawk by Gordon L. Shupp, president of the Chestnut Hill PTA, sponsors of the award.

Principal Bernard Thomas introduced the class to the members of the board and the audience. The 46-member class were presented diplomas by Jerome A. Blakeslee, president of the joint board.

Rev. John P. Kline delivered the invocation and benediction.

Businessmen Hear Foes For Mayor

RIVAL candidates for mayor of the borough were the speakers at last night's annual Summer banquet of the East Stroudsburg Businessmen's Assn. held at Altier's Inn and Motel.

Thomas L. Kistler, Republican candidate, and his Democratic rival, Oden F. Libbey, were introduced by Leon Zacher.

Kistler said the borough's schools are second to none and questioned whether the borough will be ready to handle the expected influx of persons when the Tock's Island recreation area is completed.

Libbey said the borough's tax situation needs re-evaluation and said if elected he will crusade to bring in new industry. He charged the borough is "in a rut."

The group accepted an invitation from the Exchange Club to attend its meeting next Wednesday at which the problem of how to bring new industry into the borough will be discussed.

Red Carpet Out For Princesses

THE RED carpet was out for the arrival of the Laurel Blossom Princesses yesterday for the 1961 Laurel Blossom Festival in the Poconos.

William Altier, president of the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau, welcomed the 19 girls from as many Eastern colleges at the dinner at the Penn-Stroud Hotel last night. He pointed out that all of the colleges represented last year had sent a representative and three new colleges had joined the list.

Plugging the Poconos, Altier also pointed out that the Pocono Vacation Bureau members represent 80 per cent of the resorts in the state of Pennsylvania, and promised the princesses that they would have a chance to learn to visit much of the 1,500 square miles in the Pocono resort area during their stay here.

'John Doe' Transferred To Hospital

AN unidentified man who has been held at Monroe County Jail for three weeks on a John Doe warrant charging vagrancy was taken to Allentown State Hospital yesterday. His admission to the hospital was authorized by the Monroe County Commissioners after an examination by two physicians.

Sheriff Jacob F. Altomose said the man has refused to identify himself since his commitment to jail on May 17. He was arrested in Paradise Township by state police from Mount Pocono.

The prisoner spent long periods lying in his cell with covers drawn over his head. He wore a blindfold, torn from a blanket, as the sheriff's deputies led him in shackles to a waiting car yesterday morning.

Jail records describe the man as slender, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds, with thinning brown hair and brown eyes.

Following the class song, the address was given by C. Willis Dunlap, supervising principal of Pocono Mountain Joint Schools, followed by presentation of the class gift and school gift by Franks.

The American Legion medal was presented by Lloyd Altomose, commander of Wilson-Fischer Post 413, Pocono Pines, to Lawrence Keiper, and the women's auxiliary medal by Mrs. Ralph Dunlap, president of the post's auxiliary, to Joan Planchuck. Both are eighth graders.

The home economics award was presented by Mrs. Grace Wildrick to Lucy Kay McNally, who also received the senior girl honor award from Mrs. Bernice Dyson, vice president of the Parent-Teacher Assn. The honor award to the senior boy was presented by William Quinn, president of Tobyhanna Township Volunteer Fire Co., to James Frantz.

John A. Abbruzzese, Monroe County schools psychologist, brought greetings on behalf of John Latts, county superintendent, followed by presentation of diplomas by Samuel A. Lee, principal, benediction by Rev. Chapell and the recessional by the band.

Bill To Exempt Amish Farmers

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., and Rep. George M. Rhodes, D-Pa., have introduced identical bills to exempt Amish farmers from mandatory payment of social security self-employment taxes.

Clark said persons whose religious views forbid acceptance of benefits, such as those provided under social security, may under the proposed bill file an "exemption certificate" relieving him of paying the taxes and accepting the benefits.

The bills resulted from seizure by the Internal Revenue Service last month of three horses belonging to Valentine Y. Byler, an Amish farmer at New Wilmington, Pa. The IRS said the horses to collect back social security taxes of $308.

Eminent Domain Bill Hits Barrier

HARRISBURG — A House-approved state highway codification bill is having trouble in the Senate. Most of the opposition stems from the provision which would allow the highway department to exercise eminent domain to acquire a tract of land and then resell portions not needed for highway purposes.

J. Collins McSparran, master of the State Grange, in a brief filed with the Senate Highway Committee, branded the bill "vicious, dangerous and as socialistic a piece of legislation as we have ever seen introduced in the legislative halls of this commonwealth."

Under existing law, the highway department may only exercise eminent domain for land it requires immediately for road construction work.

The provision under fire would knock down this barrier and permit the commonwealth to barter in the real estate market.

Finland Buys Brandy

Profits For All

Millions owe their jobs today to the work of Thomas A. Edison, the genius who is in the news years after his death on the occasion of the placement of his likeness in the Hall of Fame at New York University.

His ability to earn a profit was an essential part of his inventive history.

In 1862, he was a 15-year-old news vendor on the Grand Trunk Railroad. When news of the Battle of Shiloh came into Detroit, young Edison bought a thousand extra newspapers, and persuaded the railroad telegraph editor to message ahead.

Then he sold his nickel newspapers for a dime at each station on the way, as the crowds gathered, anxious for the papers.

His profit he used to buy his first laboratory equipment. Through his life, he used the profit from one invention to finance research on the next.

It is easy to forget the dividends that profits pays to us all — even other people's profits. The business world around us, which pours out the products we want and provides the jobs we need, couldn't exist without it — let alone grow. Nor for that matter, could this newspaper.

Will New Look Help CD?

How far will President Kennedy's determination to shake up our Nation's civil defense efforts be able to go?

There's more to it than his recent call for a full-scale fallout shelter program and increased funds.

At the heart of our relatively stagnant CD effort has been a general lack of enthusiasm among Americans. For civil defense to work at its optimum, a change in attitude is needed.

By moving the shelter program under Defense Department jurisdiction, the Kennedy Administration is trying a shift in emphasis. Shelters now won't be part of "civil" defense, but part of military defense. The same will be true for the warning system.

This change in emphasis may facilitate that overdue change in attitude on the part of the public. But the establishment of a workable CD machinery can be improved upon even without active public participation.

There is plenty of room for argument over whether a tripling of CD funds is necessary. Congress undoubtedly will give the President quite a bit of argument. The House Appropriations Committee already has cut $25 million from the more modest Eisenhower budget request for CD.

The extent of the "new look" for CD won't be known until recommendations of a Budget Bureau study of the agency are completed at the end of this month. But the President's actions already have stirred new life into the concept of civil defense. —Harrisburg Patriot

George Sokolsky Says . . .

Labor's Newest Problem

The high tariff was a capitalistic device to build the new and infant industries of the United States. It was Alexander Hamilton, back in the days when George Washington was President who wrote a report on manufacturers that laid the foundation for our national economic policies.

The tariff was not devised only to bring money into the Treasury but even more to protect the industries from being drowned in a sea of imports.

In recent years, American management has sought foreign markets and has even exported capital and machinery abroad. However, the worker cannot export his job. He either works here or he is out of a job. This has given concern to many labor union officers who see their industries destroyed by the course of events.

The tariff on the glass industry has since 1948 been cut from 60 per cent to 14.8 per cent with the result that the plate glass in the United States is undersold by European and Japanese producers who have gained about one-third of the domestic market.

Enoch R. Rust, International Second Vice President of the United Glass and Ceramic Workers, quotes the interesting statement of Rene Lambert, a Belgian producer of sheet glass:

"American companies, not knowing when the strikes were going to be settled, placed orders and covered their requirements for an indefinite period with the foreign manufacturers and, consequently, imports continued at higher than normal level during the first nine months of 1960."

From the labor union standpoint this interferes with the union's ability to strike and therefore with its very existence. Of this Rust says:

"When men hit the streets, they hope to win their fight because the struck company or industry can no longer turn out the goods they had been producing. Retail customers can't buy. Industrial customers can't buy and face the possibility of having to shut down their plants. And so they put pressure on the owners to meet workers' demand."

When, however, the goods can be picked up in Belgium or Japan from twelve to nineteen per cent less than the American price, the strike in the United States becomes purposeless because the goods can be obtained elsewhere. From the standpoint of the labor union, the imported goods become a strike breaker.

This raises a great many questions of union membership, the standard of living of American workers, the sociological problems of unemployment or partial unemployment and so on.

Some doubt the intensity of unemployment because they discount the factor of partial employment which can disturb the economics of a family as much as full unemployment.

According to Rust:

"Last year 7,000,000 boxes of sheet glass were imported into the United States. That's the equivalent of 3,700,000 hours of lost work for American glass workers and approximately equal to the annual production of three United States sheet glass plants.

"Or to put it another way, if that sheet glass had been made in the United States, 1,900 sheet glass workers would have been employed to make it."

This is the gist of our present industrial problem. The economist wonders how a creditor nation can limit the import of goods from countries which seek dollars to pay their debts, whereas the American worker is beginning to wonder how he is to hold his job in competition with lower wages. To this query, he must add the factor of taxes.

This question cannot be solved by political argument because in a free country, the unemployed worker has a vote the same as the employed worker. He will not long tolerate conditions which produce unemployment.

His family budget is based upon annual employment for at least forty hours a week. In the 1920's Soviet Russia solved such problems by liquidation but in this country it is not possible to liquidate workers because they object to unemployment.

In fact, the Soviet labor union is an instrument of the government and the Communist Party, and therefore exists more to discipline the worker rather than to defend him.

This then is our most serious domestic problem we face and it does not seem possible that it can be solved without protecting American prices within the United States. On the other hand, this country has made numerous commitments against a high protective tariff. Here is an obvious conflict between a social and a political solution to a very serious economic problem.

Hurricane Watchers

The Pennsylvania Story

Historic Feat

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — Reporter's Notebook:

Lost In The Shuffle — When Pennsylvania's lawmakers hustled through legislative channels and to the pen of Governor Lawrence the commonwealth's whopping big $899,000,000.00 general appropriation bill — just before the June 1 start-of-the-new-fiscal-year deadline — they accomplished a rather unique feat, an historic feat of sorts the full impact of which generally has been lost in the shuffle.

It seems that for just about the first time in long and varied history of Pennsylvania, the general appropriations bill — that piece of legislation carrying appropriations to cover day-to-day operations of state government — plowed through legislative channels and hurdles without a single change in the appropriation set-up for the various and sundry state agencies as spelled out in the original version of the bill.

Invariably in the past there have been additions and subtractions for some of the appropriations.

During the past two and a half years of the current Democratic Lawrence Administration and the preceding four years of the equally Democratic Leader Administration the two fiscal offices were in the hands of anti-administration Republicans — and of course there was no thought of inviting them into the Democratic inner sanctum.

However with the ascent of Democrats Sloan and Minehart to the fiscal podiums the picture changed color.

The question is whether they should be "cozy" with the administration. . . . The Constitution drafters obviously had a separation in mind when they specified that the two fiscal offices should be elective rather than appointive. . . . To all intents and purposes now, they might just as well be routine appointive offices.

The "unification" has gone so far that it is understood even political personnel matters involving the two fiscal offices now routinely are processed by the Governor's Personnel Office.

In a nutshell, little other than perfunctory face-saving "challenges" of the administration can be expected from the two independently elected fiscal offices in the future.

Judicial Chow — Item on an invoice to be paid from the Governor's Office: "dinners for Supreme Court — $1190" . . . With seven justices on the State Supreme Court, it would seem at first blush that the robed gentry ate heavily — to the tune of around $170 apiece. . . . It isn't quite that stuffy in actuality. . . . This is what happened!

The Governor threw a dinner for the Supreme Court justices. . . . The catering bill submitted by the A. L. Mathias Company, of Harrisburg rounded out to $1190 for the occasion and covers 140 dinners served.

You see, the dinner, while classified as being for the "Supreme Court" isn't limited just to the justices. . . . It includes their wives, and the Governor and his wife, which would bring the total up to say 16 — and the rest are made up of "aides," dignitaries of one sort or another, and of course ranking politicians of the administration.

Contracts were signed to play the annual Penn State-Colgate football game in Buffalo, Colgate does not have a large enough stadium for the crowd.

tion specifications once the bill has been reported out by the House Appropriations Committee. . . . Not so this time. . . . Every appropriation specification that went into the bill went to the Governor "as is" . . . Of course there was the provision inserted by House Republicans designed to forestall school subsidy losses growing out of higher real estate market value certifications — but that did not change the individual appropriation specifications.

Architects of the free-flying legislation: Chairman J. Dean Polen and his House Appropriations Committee. . . . Dapper Representative Polen, dean of the four-man Washington County delegation (no pun intended — he is the senior member), summed it up this way: "The legislation represented hard-headed committee determination to call the shots as they were. It's what was needed, and that was that. Lawmakers themselves apparently realized the fact this time."

Cozy Affair — The fact that the Governor has made State Treasurer Mrs. Grace M. Sloan and State Auditor General Thomas Z. Minehart members of his "Cabinet" (official family) is as interesting as it is revealing. . . . It points up a decided change on Capital Hill.

A few years back we penned an article, attempting to prove the first Delaware Water Gap Outboard Motorboat Regatta into a spotlight it so richly deserved.

We had our doubts at the time that the regatta would gain the prominence forecast by such men as Bernie Clemens, Bill Tarr, Layton Osborn and Steve Matos. However, we did feel it would be one great project if it could get its feet off the ground.

Tomorrow and Sunday the Gap Chamber of Commerce will present the fourth annual regatta from the Kittatinny Beach (New Jersey) landing. We know now it is a success.

Since the days of the small start, regatta officials, Chamber aides and other individuals have plugged hard to make the affair one of the brightest spots on the social calendar of the area.

State To Save Seat

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — The House of Representatives is apparently going to be increased after all.

Following months of backing and filling on this politics-charged question, Speaker Sam Rayburn and the other Democratic leaders have decided to throw their weight behind an expansion of three or four members — for a permanent total of 438 or 439.

The exact number will be agreed on later this month. The proposed additions would "save" one seat each for Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Missouri.

Under the 1960 census, in the Congress elected next year, Massachusetts is slated to lose two seats, from 14 to 12; Pennsylvania three, from 30 to 27; Illinois one, from 25 to 24; Missouri one, from 11 to 10.

Twelve other states also will lose seats; 11 one each, and New York two. Nine states will gain seats; seven one each; California 8, and Florida 4.

The backstage decision to seek a three-to-four increase in the permanent size of the House was reached at a strategy meeting headed by Speaker Sam Rayburn. Two main factors were behind this compromise:

A "small" expansion could be justified on the ground that two seats already have been temporarily added to provide representation for the new states of Alaska and Hawaii. A larger increase, strongly favored by the states due to lost House seats, might provoke hostile public reaction against the Democrats in next year's elections.

So to play it safe, Rayburn and the other leaders agreed to limit the expansion to four seats at the most.

Whether they can get away with that remains to be seen.

Much Still Undecided — This plan has won the support of two influential opponents of a big increase — Democratic Floor Leader John McCormack, Mass., and Rep. Emanuel Celler, N.Y., chairman of the Judiciary Committee. They have signified their approval of the compromise.

But Republican leaders, who weren't consulted at all, may have different ideas. The yhave still to learn about this unannounced proposal and what they do about it is conjectural.

Meanwhile, the required legislation is already being drafted.

Reps. Basil Whitener, D.N.C., and John Lesinski, D-Mich., have bills to raise the membership to 438. And Rep. Francis Walter, D-Pa., chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee has a measure to make the total 439.

The last permanent increase, to 435, was voted in 1913.

Whatever Congress does about the size of the House, it will still be up to the states that lose and gain seats to reapportion them. So far, only a small number have done that.

Unless the others do, that could have spectacular political repercussions.

In that event, in the states losing seats, all House members would have to be elected by statewide ballot. In the states that gain, this would apply only to new seats.

With some 150 such seats at stake, the Democrats could lose control of the House.

They now have an 88-vote margin. But with a large number of seats up for grabs in statewide elections throughout the country, a Republican trend in 1962 could result in stunning political upsets.

Leaders of both parties might have to run at large, foremost among them Floor Leader McCormack, Mass., and former Speaker Joseph Martin, R-Mass.

The Constitution does not specify how House members are to be elected. The district system did not come into existence until 1842 when Congress voted that in the present House, Republicans represent the largest and smallest districts.

Representative James Uff, in California's 28th district, has the largest, with 1,014,460 population; Rep. John Bennett, 12th Michigan district, the smallest, with 177,431.

James Roosevelt, D-Calif., chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the measure, is in Geneva.

Roosevelt is attending an international conference. Powell's mission to Paris is less clear. "Our daughter, Libby, is graduating from the Convent of the Sacred Heart, and we're expecting our fourth child in October. He'll make a nice playmate for our two-year-old son, Bill, Jr."

Mrs. Miller also revealed that she and her husband are ardent golfers and bridge players. She likes to cook, and her husband's preferences are chicken, steak and spare-ribs, in that order.

Husbands to Burn — "It says here," the first spinner told her spinster friend, "a woman just lost her second husband — and had him cremated."

Falcons Set Up Corporation

THE FALCONS Drum and Bugle Corps of East Stroudsburg has just completed the process of creating a corporation. The corps will henceforth be known as Falcons, Inc., Senior Drum and Bugle Corps.

The reasons for the incorporation are to protect members of the corps as well as the members of the American Legion post which the corps represents.

The Falcons are looking for new members and anyone interested in belonging is invited to attend any practice session held at the Legion home in East Stroudsburg. Experience is not necessary but is an advantage.

The Falcons music and drill instructor is James Prime, who also handles the same position with the Bangor Yellow Jackets.

Prime also arranges all the music now being played by the corps. These selections include "St. Louis Blues March," "Too-ra-loo-ra-loo-ra," "Lady is A Tramp," "Granada" and the song from the market place scene in the movie "The Robe."

Presently the Falcons are working on "Blue Tango" and "Columbia The Gem of The Ocean."

One of the new numbers Prime is now arranging for the corps is a medley of "Lullaby of Broadway" and "Give My Regards To Broadway."

Last year in Philadelphia the Falcons won third place honors in the American Legion State Convention parade. This year the corps expects to attend the same function in Erie.

The Falcons expect to be in the field of competition next year.

Soviets Ahead In Warfare

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Army says the Soviet Union is five years ahead of the United States in chemical and biological warfare.

Russian techniques are so proficient, the Army says, the Communists probably have the means to drop a small vial of highly infectious material into the ventilating system of a building as large as the Pentagon.

The Army says the results could sicken all 30,000 employees in the Pentagon.

Teen-Ager In Grown Up World

By BOB CUNIFF

(Gilbert Youth Researcher)

THOUGH Paul Anka is barely emerging from his teens, he's been grown up for a long time. It is impossible to think of him in terms of the teen-age world. His conversation is all about show business.

"All my contacts are with show people, my manager, bookers, my friends, other performers. What else would we talk about?"

Since Paul's first record hit ("Diana") which some of his admirers think he still hasn't topped, he has been almost totally immersed in the processing of songs, writing and singing his own, and writing them for other singers like Connie Francis.

Paul is ambitious, but his yearnings aren't expressed with the kid-from-the-streets, I'll-show-the-world bumpiousness of a Bobby Darin. Paul knows where he's going, and he knows how to get there.

"You have to merchandise yourself for a long career. I made it as a teen singer because I think I knew what kind of songs teen-agers wanted to hear."

Paul is already at work at the music and lyrics for a Broadway show, his largest aspiration so far. He's had no trouble conquering adult audiences. And the teens are still loyal. "I hope my fans will grow up with me."

Bursting with confidence, Paul is still as enthusiastic as a high school sophomore. He admits that he heats up when a spotlight is on, "When the orchestra is in full swing and the spots come on, I just seem to fall in line. I guess that's show business."

Much has been made of the fact that Paul moved his family down from Ottawa to a large home in New Jersey, and he thinks that it was a crucial step in his career. "It enabled me to keep the closeness to my mother and father that helped to build my confidence. It was a big step for my family to uproot themselves like that, but it has worked out beautifully."

To his teen-age fans, who still comprise the largest part of his audience, Paul passes along this show business advice, "My advice to teens thinking of show business as a career is to take advantage of school plays, community projects. And always spend as much time as possible on whatever you are capable of in show business."

1512 Acres In County To Be Diverted

THE final report on the sign-up under the 1961 feed grain program in Monroe County shows 1512 acres to be diverted this year from corn and grain sorghum plantings on 125 farms, Donald Reish, chairman of the Monroe County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee has announced.

The final figures for Pennsylvania shows 168,160 acres to be diverted on 15,050 farms. For the farms signed in Pennsylvania, possible advance payments under provisions permitting about half of the payments to be made this spring total about $2,155,988.06.

Under the 1961 feed grain program, farmers earned payments in the form of certificates for diverting corn and grain sorghum acreage to conserving uses. Producers may receive grain or the cash equivalent of grain for their certificates.

Better Balance

The program aims at a better balance between production and utilization of corn and grain sorghum acreage this year, and at the same time to maintain producers' income.

The program is voluntary. Corn and grain sorghum producers will not be eligible for price support on any of their 1961 feed grain crops unless they cooperate in the feed grain program.

No Steel Price Hike Is Likely

NEW YORK (AP) — The outlook for a general rise in steel prices is clouding up, the Iron Age said yesterday.

Only 10 days ago, a boost appeared likely, probably next fall when industry employment costs go up a second step under a 1960 wage contract.

The metalworking weekly said in the meantime pressures against an increase have developed both within the industry itself and in Washington.

Furthermore, first signs have appeared of the usual slackening in summertime demand for steel.

Wage Hikes For PP&L Employees

THE PENNSYLVANIA POWER and Light Co. and the Employees Independent Association have announced the agreement on a two-year contract carrying an average of 19 cents an hour in wage increases over the period.

The new pact, covering some 4,000 employees in five divisions of the company, replaced a two-year agreement which terminated June 2. It includes all divisions except Scranton, where the labor agreement is negotiated separately because it involves other unions.

The contract calls for wage adjustments effective as of Monday, the start of the new contract year, ranging from about 6 cents an hour to about 16 cents an hour, depending on the job classification. The average hike is 10 cents an hour.

Amoco Quits Fair Trading In Keystone

AMERICAN Oil Co. has notified its dealers throughout the state of Pennsylvania that it has withdrawn from fair trade pricing in that state, according to an announcement by G. D. Carroll, American's regional manager whose headquarters are in Baltimore, Md.

"An extensive study has disclosed," Carroll said, "that fair trade does not meet the needs of our company and its jobbers and dealers in the state of Pennsylvania."

Emphasizing that withdrawal from fair trade did not signal any immediate, wide-spread, changes in its prices to dealers in the state of Pennsylvania, Carroll stated that "our prices will be under constant review, subject to revision upward as well as downward, as local economic and competitive conditions indicate. We propose to stay competitive and to see that our dealers in each locality are able to price competitively, while striving at the same time to get fair prices for our products."

Adlai Journeys To Argentina

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson flew to Argentina yesterday, the second country on his South American tour as President Kennedy's special envoy, after what he called helpful talks with Venezuela's President Romulo Betancourt.

The chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations spent 75 minutes on his farewell call to Betancourt. This followed a 4½-hour conversation after his arrival Sunday.

"I have received a clear understanding of Venezuela's economic and social situation, some of the most pressing immediate problems and the means the government is proposing for their solution," Stevenson said.

Educators Invited To Cimarron

MEMBERS of the teaching profession in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut will be able to visit Cimarron City, as guests of the management, it was announced by Robert Rosenberg, president of the Monticello Lakes Amusement Corp., which operates the western frontier town at Monticello, N.Y.

Rosenberg said that the professional staff members of all schools in the four state area would be accorded entrance to the park with their families anytime during the 1961 season upon presentation of their teacher's association card.

The western replica village will be open weekends in June and daily from July 1 through September. It is also open on weekends in June by reservation from organized groups.

Cimarron City contains more than a score of faithfully reproduced western buildings, authentically furnished in the post-civil war era of the old west.

Speaking for the directors, Mr. Rosenberg, a teacher himself, said: "We are pleased to extend a special invitation to administrators and teachers, to enjoy the new 1961 program at Cimarron City. We hope that they will avail themselves of our facilities for a day of fun for the entire family at our real live western town."

BARON AND FRIENDS—Baron Reinhart of Lake Valhalla, one of the top producers of puppet shows, poses with a few of his 'friends.' The puppets are from the many shows Baron has produced, directed and performed down through the years. His latest is "The Witch and the Magic Hat" at East Stroudsburg Armory, June 16. Proceeds go to the Monroe County Heart Fund.

'Funtastic' Puppet Show Set For Debut On June 16

AFTER FIVE months in the making, the ever-moving puppeteer Baron Reinhart has come up with another "funtastic" show.

As he had done in the past with "Christmas Eve on Tweens" and "All Baba and the Forty Thieves," Reinhart couples fun and fantastic schemes in his new production — "The Witch and the Magic Hat."

The first Spring showing is set for Friday, June 16 at the East Stroudsburg Armory beginning at 8 p.m. Proceeds from the puppet performance will go to the Monroe County Heart Fund.

Guests for the evening will be children of the retarded classes of area schools. Reinhart has extended a special invitation to the retarded children to be his guest at the showing.

Dr. John Abruzzese, Monroe County school psychologist, will distribute the tickets to the children.

Original Play

"The Witch" is an original play by Reinhart and Bruce Phillips. Phillips has joined the Lake Valhalla puppeteer after assisting him in a number of previous shows.

The story is a fairy-tale type with strains of modernism throughout. A practical moral is woven in the conclusion and if adhered to and practiced is a well-learned lesson.

In addition, the show is full of fantasy and excitement in appealing to both adults and children alike.

At a recent all-adult preview, "The Witch and the Magic Hat" was highly praised for its originality, staging, and all-around family entertainment value.

The complete show — actually from beginning to end — has been done through Reinhart's unceasing work. The new characters for the play, costumes, stage scenery, background music and much more, has been either performed or directed by the puppet master.

For this production, new lighting techniques and special stage effects are to be used to heighten the action and suspense qualities. The background music, sound effects, and the other show parts are equalled to any drama seen and heard on television. This portion of the production was handled solely by Phillips as was done in all the other Reinhart productions.

Although Reinhart, a member of the puppeteers of America, usually takes most of the voice parts in his productions, other voices are employed to give this show a well-rounded balance. The voices in this showing are by Phillips, Natalie Eschenbach, Raymond Schwartzkopf and that of the producer.

Miss Wingerter, an eager student of puppetry, has proven herself more than capable in manipulating the majority of the characters. This is an accomplishment not easily acquired.

John Wingerter will be at the control in the various lighting effects as well as making scenery changes. This is his first year in working with the puppet group and is doing a fine job.

The play itself has a familiar moral ending but the performance is one filled with fun and dramatic moments. In it, Willetta — the witch — claims a magic potion which is supposed to make everyone who drinks it "strong and fearless."

The ending concerns faith in one's self deriding the old claims that magic potions help make the man.

However, this "strong and fearless potion" will go on sale at the showing as well as at the J.J. Newberry Store lunch counter.

Tickets for the show are on sale exclusively at Newberry's.

No Action On Mine Safety Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Rules Committee yesterday refused to clear for floor action a bill to extend provisions of the Mine Safety Act to small mining operations.

The measure previously had been approved by the House Education and Labor Committee.

Under present law mines employing 14 or fewer men underground are exempt from provisions of the Mine Safety Act. The measure would have removed this exemption.

E-Burg Girl Embarks On Air Career

NORMA ACE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Durling Ace, Jr., of East Stroudsburg, is about to embark on the profession of airline secretarial work.

Miss Ace, along with girls from all over the country, has been accepted at the famous Grace Downs Air Career School, 477 First Avenue, in New York City.

At the school, she will be given a course of secretarial training which will fit the needs of leading industrial and airline executives. It is a two-year course given in one year.

Formerly, the headquarters of the N.Y.U. Medical Center, the school has been converted into a building containing the most modern training equipment and dormitories to insure the best possible preparation for a secretarial career.

Evans-Blitz To Sponsor Bloodmobile

BARRETT — Evans-Blitz Post 922, American Legion, will sponsor the June visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile to Monroe County.

John Baker, blood drive chairman, said the mobile unit will be at the Canadensis Methodist Church on June 22 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The public is asked to cooperate so that the full 125-pint quota may be obtained, Baker said.

Patella Graduates

NICHOLAS Paul Patella, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Hayes of 45 N. Courtland St., East Stroudsburg, Pa., was graduated from Wake Forest College, Winston Salem, N.C., June 5.

He was among more than 400 who received degrees.

Patella, who was a football star, majored in education and received a B.S. degree.

No Such Luck

DARTMOUTH, Nova Scotia (AP)—Mrs. Stephen Hayes found a four-leaf clover in her lawn yesterday. A few minutes later her husband's parked car was struck by another vehicle, causing damage estimated at $500. Tuesday a five-ton truck loaded with cement rolled over and demolished the Hayes' picket fence.

This Is Love

Dear Abby: I am in love with a man who treats me like dirt. The worse he treats me, the more I love him. I have broken up with him a dozen times, but I always call and ask him to forgive me even though he was the one who was in the wrong. I can't understand myself, Abby. I could have gone with many men who treated me like a queen, but I always go back to this no-good tormentor who gives me nothing but heartaches. This has been going on for six years, and I am almost 27. How can I kill a love that is killing me?

COMPLETELY MISERABLE

Dear Miserable: Your slavish devotion to a "no-good tormentor" is not "love." Its physical attraction, passion and the compulsion to punish yourself — all tightly bound together. Unless you want a life of misery, put this man out of your heart and mind. And pray hard for the strength never again to "love" a man you cannot like.

Dear Abby: Will you please do me a favor and wake up these young wives who are always running home to Mother for a visit? What are we young husbands supposed to do with our evenings? Sure, we love our wives, but we get lonesome. It's no crime to stop in a bar (after dinner alone) for a night cap. There are always some friendly gals there who will take the time to talk to us. I have seen real nice guys get involved when they have had no bad intentions. And many marriages have gone on the rocks because of an affair that started just that way.

My mother-in-law has several daughters and she is always cooking up some excuse to get them home with her. One of these days she is liable to have one (or more) of them home for good.

LONESOME

Dear Abby: I am a 13-year-old boy and for Christmas my parents gave me an encyclopedia set, and ever since then they won't answer any question I ask them. Please do not think I am ungrateful because I know I am very lucky to have parents who care enough to give me a gift like this, but my problem gets worse every day. When I ask a simple question, they always send me to the encyclopedia to look up the answer. Do you think this is fair?

NOT UNGRATEFUL

Dear Not: Don't complain. You will retain the information much longer if you have had to look it up. Besides, it's good practice learning how to use the encyclopedia.

Confidential To "Confused Cookie": Give him up before it costs you your marriage.

Pocono Playhouse To Open 15th Season On June 12

POCONO Playhouse in Mountaintown, will open its 15th summer season next Monday night with Herbert Marshall and Dora Weissman co-starring in the three-act Broadway hit, "A Majority of One."

Marshall's name was emblazoned across theatre marquees on Broadway long before his arrival in Hollywood, in such plays as "Brewster's Millions" and "The Faithful Heart."

He made his screen debut in "The Letter" and his career is marked by well-remembered performances in "Accent on Youth," "Bill of Divorcement," "The Little Foxes," "Duel in the Sun" and "The Fly." His two most recent roles were in "College Confidential" and "Midnight Lace."

Miss Weissman, co-starring with Marshall, has been in the theatre for 50 years with a career including producing, directing and acting in all media of theatre, motion pictures, radio and television. Her Broadway debut was made in "Hitch My Wagon," followed by other successful appearances.

She played in the first program that appeared on TV, "The Goldbergs," starring Gertrude Berg, and was Mrs. Herman, Molly's good neighbor, for over eight years. She was also seen on other top TV shows. In the movies, Miss Weissman was featured in "The Middle of the Night" and "Guerrilla Girl."

Rolling Comedy

"A Majority of One" is a rollicking comedy and a lively bill of fare. It has a rather novel philosophy for our time, for it argues that parents are often smarter than their offspring and that intolerance results from lack of understanding.

But this philosophy is merely incidental to a heart warming hurricane of hilarity that moves from Brooklyn to Tokyo involving secret missions and a lovable romance between a Jewish widow and a Japanese financier. Included in the supporting cast will be Ruth Kaner, Risa Schwartz, Stuart Unger, Mako, Calvin Ander, Misa Ban, Yonoko Ohashi, Pat Typond and Wally Peterson.

The play will continue through Saturday night, June 17, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday at 2:40 p.m. Reservations for tickets may be made by calling LY 5-7456.

Peace Corps Asks Help From Labor And Industry

CHICAGO (AP)—American business and labor leaders were urged yesterday to lend top-flight manpower to the newly created Peace Corps, and their first public reactions mostly were favorable to the idea.

The appeal for help was made by R. Sargent Shriver Jr., director of the Peace Corps which has been set up to furnish needed manpower and skills to undeveloped areas of the world.

To business heads, Shriver said: "Paying taxes is no longer in itself sufficient; the Peace Corps needs the kind of trained and aggressive people who make a success in business. . . I hope American businesses and industries will provide two-year leaves of absence, without pay, but with re-employment benefits for their employees—whether top-level administrators or secretaries—who can meet a critical need abroad."

Researchers On Projects In Area To Get Degrees

EASTON—Two Philadelphia-ans who have carried on independent research projects will graduate with bachelor's degrees at Lafayette College commencement exercises today.

They are Fred W. McDowell and M. Graham Park III.

McDowell will work toward a Ph.D. in geochemistry at Columbia University under a research assistantship next year.

As a National Science Foundation undergraduate researcher during his junior year at Lafayette, McDowell assisted in the preparation of a paper that described a survey of the geological Centerfield Coral Zone in the Pocono Mountains.

His field trips in the area northeast of Easton resulted in observations of the types of organisms that built up the coral reef there 300 million years ago, and the kind of climate and life forms that existed.

The paper, written in conjunction with Dr. James P. Beerbower, associate professor of geology, was published by the Pennsylvania Academy of Science.

As an honor student in the geology department at Lafayette, McDowell prepared a thesis concerning the brachiopod Douvillea, which he said is "one of the more common fossils" found in the northeastern Pennsylvania zone.

His research was carried on in the Stroudsburg-Saylorsburg area.

Park will do graduate work in chemical engineering at the University of Delaware under an assistantship.

In his research at Lafayette, he sought to determine what organic solvent might most readily extract acetic acid from water.

Income Debentures

By William A. Doyle

Q. Suppose I buy a Missouri Pacific Railroad five percent bond, due to mature in the year 2043. This bond has been trading around 54.80. I can buy a $100 par value bond for $54.80, I put up 40 percent and get a bank loan for the other 60 percent. I make 15 percent on my money. How crazy am I?

A. Before we test your sanity, we had better spell out a few financial facts of life.

First off, the MoPac 5s of 2043 you talk about are actually "income debentures." They are debt obligations of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. If you buy $100 par value of this issue, the company is pledged to pay back the amount of the par value ($100) when the debenture matures in the year 2043. That maturity date is 84 years away.

Debentures are not secured by a lien on a piece of property, as mortgage bonds are. Debentures are secured by a company's promise to pay — making them a great deal like promissory notes. And this is an income debenture — meaning that interest normally will be paid only if the company earns enough money to meet the interest payments. The interest is "non-cumulative." If an interest payment is skipped, it does not have to be made up in the future.

Although there doesn't seem to be much risk about the continuation of interest payments in the future, there is no guarantee.

The interest rate is set at five percent of par value — when earned. If you buy a $100 par value debenture, you'll collect $5 a year interest (if the interest is earned) no matter what price you pay.

If you buy it at 54 ($54 for each $100 par value of debenture) you should be happy — as long as the interest continues to roll in.

If you can borrow 60 percent of the $54 purchase price, you'll only have to put up $21.60 in cash. Depending upon what interest you have to pay on the borrowed 60 percent ($32.40) you could end up making 15 percent on your money.

That 15 percent, of course, would be yield on your investment — not yield to maturity. The big trick would be to get a bank to make a loan of 60 percent on this kind of collateral. Unless you're a darned good customer, the bank may tell you you're crazy.

Q. I have some Series E, U.S. savings bonds, which will mature this year. At that time they will have a value of $2,000. I know I can continue to hold them and that interest will continue to accumulate, so that they will have even higher values in the future.

But I am unemployed this year and expect little employment until the fall. Next year, however, I should be back on full employment. Would this be a good time to redeem the E bonds — for income tax purposes?

A. Sure, this would be a natural — for tax purposes. There are two ways to pay Federal income taxes on E-bond interest. You can either declare the interest and pay income taxes on it each year. Or you can wait until you cash the bonds and pay income taxes on all the accrued interest you receive. Most people use the second method.

This year, while you are in a low tax bracket, would be a natural time to cash the bonds. If you wait until a year when you are in a higher tax bracket, you will have to pay a bigger chunk of income taxes on the E bond interest you receive.

(Mr. Doyle will answer only representative letters of general interest in his column. He cannot answer phone queries.)

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Well, anyway, it was a warm rain with which we welcomed our 1961 Laurel Princesses. Actually, I doubt if they even knew it was raining at their welcoming dinner last night at the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Schuchard had really rolled out the red carpet with laurel sprigs on the grapefruit baskets, wild rice with the cornish hens, and a dessert that looked like colorful potted laurels.

For a while there, it looked as if potted laurel was all we were going to have in the Poconos with no Spring at all, but there was enough of it in the decorations at the dinner so at least our princesses know what it looks like.

And for the few of us who had a chance to see what they look like: They're lovely and with the type of good looks that I doubt if even a hard rain could spoil: Natural and lighted by intelligence and interest in a great many things.

Nineteen of them all together can be pretty overwhelming at first glance and Sally Ferree's exuberant welcome having directed all their attention my way, I proceeded to demonstrate how a social editor should act by catching the salad plate with the arm of a chair and dumping the whole thing upside down on the chair itself.

Well, the etiquette book says that the first duty of a hostess is to make her guests feel at ease, but I wish I wouldn't do my duty so exuberantly. Falling flat on my face or dumping over a water glass would have been sufficient.

Oh well, I'm not the only one with a red face. David Gothe had completely forgotten about the fashion show until his office called him in Europe. He flew home yesterday morning and is going to include some of his Fall line—even before it's in the Couture Group Press Week Showings—so I'll be able to scoop myself on fashions tonight.

By the way, what are you wearing? Don't tell me: I'll be looking for myself.

Chicken Pudding From Virginia Makes A Change

Serving a dish based on an old-time recipe gives a hostess a pleasantly secure feeling. When several generations have praised a combination, the chances are it's really good to eat.

Chicken pudding has a long history. A cook-book author of the 1880's called it "a favorite Virginia dish." The pudding is made two ways, with a batter similar to that of popovers and Yorkshire pudding and with one that is more substantial and pudding-like. The following recipe belongs in the latter category.

Through the years Chicken Pudding has appeared under various names: Colonial Chicken, Chicken Yorkshire, Chicken on a Cloud and Popover Chicken Pie.

Chicken Pudding
1 broiler-fryer
1½ cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
4 tablespoons salad oil
3 eggs
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon baking powder
¾ teaspoon poultry seasoning
Have the chicken cut into 10 pieces; wash and drain. Mix together ¼ cup of the flour, 1 teaspoon of the salt and the pepper; coat chicken with mixture. Brown chicken slowly in 2 tablespoons of the salad oil in a large skillet; drain on absorbent paper. Beat eggs until yolks and whites are blended; mix in milk and remaining 2 tablespoons salad oil. Add remaining 1 cup flour, remaining ¼ teaspoon salt, baking powder and poultry seasoning to egg mixture; beat until smooth. Pour batter into greased baking dish (8 by 12 by 2 inches or 9 by 9 by 2 inches). Place browned chicken in batter. Bake in a moderate (350 degrees) oven 45 minutes to 1 hour. Serve with chicken gravy, made from drippings in skillet after browning chicken, and chicken stock. Makes 4 servings.

NOTE-WORTHY — The gentleman buying pale blue stretch slippers in our hosiery department the other afternoon was Bob Huffman, Sears' advertising manager, who said his wife was celebrating a birthday . . . One of the happiest secrets in our store is being whispered to her special friends and customers by one of our most popular employees. Are you guessing? . . . The busy woman breezing through Wyckoff's the other afternoon with a big armful of Laurel Time programs was Ira Miller (Bob's wife) who did an excellent job in compiling and editing them. A great deal of work, well done, as is always true when Ira launches a project . . . Incidentally, you can pick up your souvenir copy with pictures of all the pretty princesses, when you shop Wyckoff's . . . If you don't know me, I was the excited damsel rushing through the store the other afternoon looking for my mislaid black and silver ballpoint pen with the microphone on the clip. It was a gift, and I hate to lose gifts. I found it, however, right on the handbag showcase where I'd laid it while looking over the very lovely 2.98 clutch bags so many persons are selecting as graduation gifts. Some are of plastic that looks decisively like fine-quality leather, particularly in the bone shade. Others are of tapestry-type fabric. The plastics are outfitted with comb, mirror, attractive lining, and, if memory serves, a concealed handle . . . In that department also, I found a very fine looking white linen handkerchief, a regular 1.00 value, for only 59c. If I'd had the money, I'd have bought a dozen. Very good looking! . . . Talking with Reba Marean, I learned that one of the saleswomen's complaints here in the store is that many customers attempt to serve themselves then walk away dissatisfied, not knowing that the item they are seeking is right on the next rack or shelf. "If people would only ask for what they want, or permit us to assist them," Reba said, "it would be much more satisfactory for everyone." This is undoubtedly true. One customer, for instance, almost walked away without slacks because she felt we had nothing to fit her. Actually, she was looking at TEEN sizes, not even being in the right department . . . Recently I received from Mary Brown, publicist for Hill and Knowlton, a can of RIGHT GUARD, the new deodorant by Gilette. It is a spray deodorant that dries instantly, with no running down the arm, gooey stickiness, or mess. Primarily for men, Gilette advertises it as a deodorant "the entire family can use." At my home, we are all delighted by it. Pearl Walters tells me we are sold out at the moment, but it is probably being re-stocked . . . We've found a new family game that is keeping us entertained on otherwise unscheduled evenings. It's called Crazy Eights, and while you may have played it for years, I just happened to see the cards in our toy department recently. A pack is very inexpensive, and a nice addition to the family game drawer . . . I also took modeling clay home one recent evening, and discovered my son has a knack for making unusual heads and faces. Ever since he saw Shorty Widmer at work with penknife and clay, it's almost impossible to keep him away from it . . . Can't think of anything nicer than seeing "Papa" Wyckoff back at the store, and he's been coming in almost daily since leaving the hospital. As I've said before, things don't seem the same to any of us when he's away. . . Mind if I remind you of several important dates? June 18th is FATHER'S DAY. (For gifts and cards, shop Wyckoff's.) June 20th is the Miss Pocono Mountains pageant at the Sherman Theatre, in the evening between shows. Wednesday, June 21st, is the annual Hadassah-Wyckoff Fashion Show at Tamiment-in-the-Poconos. Those desiring to do so may make reservations for dinner. Those not so desiring, may attend the show only, at 1.50 per ticket. There will be stunning prizes, dancing for those who wish, refreshments for all. (For tickets, shop Wyckoff's gift wrap center.)
